The Department of State External Research Program

The External Research Program of the Department of State brings to bear on foreign policy the special knowledge and insights to be found outside the Government in universities, nonprofit research organizations, and among private foreign affairs experts. Outside studies supplement the Department's own in-house research capabilities and provide independent, expert views to policy officers and analysts. The Department looks to external research to help:

- Detect or clarify situations and trends in foreign affairs.
- Anticipate international problems and opportunities.
- Review, evaluate, and plan foreign policies and programs—political, economic, social, technological, cultural, etc.
- Illuminate and improve the management, organization, and conduct of U.S. foreign relations.
- Improve and advance theory, methods, and data in disciplines and fields which bear on foreign affairs.

The Department draws on external research in a number of ways and through a variety of channels. There is a steady exchange of information and ideas between Department officials and outside specialists engaged in research on foreign affairs. Although much of this free flow takes place informally, there are several formal routes for the introduction of external research into policy:

- Study contracts with universities, research organizations, or individual specialists. A Department-wide Research Council plans and coordinates major contract studies.
- Use of private experts as consultants.
- Organization of Department research conferences, symposia, roundtables, and seminars.
- The Foreign Affairs Research Documentation Center which collects and lends a variety of research papers to Government officers.

The Department's External Research Program also benefits from and contributes to the foreign affairs research programs supported by other Government departments and agencies. This is accomplished through an interagency committee on foreign affairs research chaired by the Department of State and reporting through the Under Secretaries Committee to the National Security Council and the President.

For more information about the Department of State External Research Program, address inquiries to E. Raymond Platig, Director, Office of External Research, Department of State, Washington, D.C. 20520.
